History-Fire Alarms Received and Volunteers Alerted

When most fire departments were organized in the county there was no centralized dispatch center. Most had to rely on phone lines to receive alarms from the public. Also all had some type of siren or horns on the station and throughout the district to let volunteers know there was an emergency. Early phone systems had on duty operators who would answer the alarms and activate the siren. Montour Falls had the hospital operator answer calls and activate the siren. They would call the fire station phone and the first volunteer would answer the call and take the information from them. Watkins Glen had the P.D. who would answer the call then activate the siren. They were located in the same building so they would alert volunteers as they came in. Odessa started with an operator then went to a fire phone (10) system to answer the call. One person would stay on and give information to station. All phones could activate the siren. Then they would write location on a blackboard at the station. The board is still there.

Mecklenburg had a phone system and a button downtown to activate the siren . the station was close by. Francis Furcha would go across the road and activate the siren. This article will be continued as I gather information on Burdett, Beaver Dams, Tyrone , Hector and Monterey

Fire Prevention Finishes Year

Learn Not to Burn program pays visit to WGES

The Learn Not to Burn program at the Watkins Glen Elementary School reached its annual May climax Tuesday with a visit by Watkins Glen and Hector firefighters with fire engines. Kids from pre-K through 4th grade got a close-up look at the engines, explained to them by visiting firefighters. The program, which started in the 1970s, sees monthly visits by firefighters to area elementary schools, culminating in the visit with trucks. Fourth graders received a Learn Not to Burn drawstring backpack (pictured), while the younger kids received plastic fire helmets. The kids also presented colored drawings of firefighters to the visiting instructors. Article by Odessa File

Big thanks goes to Brandon Swarts for taking on as the head of the Fire Prevention program. This is not an easy task and takes a lot of time to fill boxes, make schedules, keep track of students progress. The teachers in all schools all need a pat on the back as they support the program a 100% and that means a lot. Burdett Fire Department also has taken on the Montour elementary school. Thanks to all. You have no idea how many lives you have saved and fires being prevented.
